

TWO THOUSAND TREES GREENHOUSE SOLAR POWERED STAGE

Festival

Two Thousand Trees Festival is a green and ethical music festival, held at Upcote Farm near Gloucester and plays host to 3500 festival-goers. Kit Kaboodle have become a permanent fixture at Two Thousand Trees festival having taken over the small DJ and replacing it with a solar powered Bedouin Tent and an abundance of décor. As a festival with an eco-friendly conscience, the solar powered "Greenhouse" Stage fits well within the festival's comprehensive environmental policy.

Kit Kaboodle's creative vision, eco-ethics and love for festivals made the Greenhouse a roaring success. The stage was supplied, built and part-curated and fully stage-managed by Kit Kaboodle, adding a third and much needed corner of Two Thousand Trees. This previously unloved area of the festival, regularly had in excess of 600+ festival goers clapping, cheering and dancing along with performers.

"Using the guys from Kit Kaboodle to run our third stage was one of the best decisions we made all year! Not only are Kit Kaboodle incredibly professional and well organised, but they also bring a fun and creative outlook to each and every aspect of their role. We love them!"

*James Scarlett - Festival Director
Two Thousand Trees*